NEW SURVEY SHARES PARENTS PERSPECTIVES ON EARLY LEARNING CENTRES IN THE ACT

DATE: WEDNESDAY 20 NOVEMBER 2019

A survey of 786 parents of children attending Early Learning Centres (ELCs) in Canberra has explored the perceptions and experiences of families who attend Early Childhood Education and Care (Early Childhood Education and Care).

The survey was carried out by the Children First Alliance; a network of ACT not-for-profit ECEC and is being released to coincide with Universal Children's Day and the release of the Children First Alliance's new Policy Statement.

The majority of parents surveyed reported a number of positive outcomes for their children as a result of attending an ELC, including positive social skills (83%), greater independence (68%), improved communication skills (64%) and greater confidence (58%).

Co-Chair of the Alliance and CEO of Community Services #1 Ms Amanda Tobler said "Social connection, independence, communication and improved confidence are skills that are vital to children. The survey has reaffirmed that quality Early Childhood Education and Care (ECEC) contributes to the development of these lifelong skills that give children the best start in life."

The survey also supported evidence from the ACT Government's own reviews and reports from providers of ECEC, by demonstrating that there may be an oversupply of ELCs in the ACT, with almost three-quarters (74%) of parents surveyed indicating that they didn't find it difficult to find a place in an ELC in the ACT for their child or children. Of these parents, more than one third (35%) of parents found it easy to find a place for their child or children in an ELC, 10% found it very easy and 29% were neutral.

Co-Chair of the Alliance and CEO of Communities@Work Ms Lee Maiden said "We're hearing from parents that they are no longer finding it difficult to find places in Early Learning Centres across Canberra, demonstrating that there is no longer a shortage of places for children and suggesting that there may be an oversupply, which is something that we have been seeing for several years. Planning needs to reflect community need for Early Learning Centres in the same way that planning for schools considers community need. This will ensure that children get the best possible education and care and that our hard working workforce and resources will be used in the most effective way."

The majority of parents (80%) also support the extension of free Government preschool to three-year-old children in the ACT.

The Children First Alliance Policy Statement has four priority areas: supporting children and families experiencing disadvantage to access and engage in ECEC, providing ongoing universal access to ECEC for four-year-old children and continuing work to extend access to three-year-old children, valuing and investing in the ECEC workforce and ensuring that planning processes support the development of a strong ECEC sector.

Alliance Co-Chair Amanda Tobler said “Canberra parents are very supportive of the ACT Government’s move to introduce universal early childhood education to three-year-old children. This is a measure that will ensure that no child misses out on important education and care that can result in life-long impacts. The ACT Government should be commended for working towards the implementation of this important measure.”

The survey and the Children’s First Alliance’s new Policy Priorities will be released at an event to be held at Southern Cross Early Childhood School, 33 Wirraway Cres, Scullin at 10am on 20 November.
